City Council discusses options for strengthening daytime crime control

The design for the City seal and logo was voted on by the Council once again Monday night, after several citizens voiced their concern that the word "California" did not appear on either design. The Council agreed that it was important to have "California" on the seal and logo in cases where it was seen out of the County, and asked that staff have the designer add "California" to both the seal and logo.

A spokesman from the Lemon Grove Senior Center, Don Lockwood, addressed the Council concerning parking problems in the center's lot. He informed the council that there are only two handicapped parking spaces in the lot and, given the fact that many seniors use walkers and have handicapped plates, there should be more spaces. Also, several residents in the area have been storing their cars in the center's parking lot, making it difficult for seniors and visitors to park close to the center. City Manager Jack Shelver said the City was looking into posting signs in the parking lot prohibiting overnight parking.

The council also discussed two aspects of the proposed budget for the fiscal year 1990-91. Of special concern to the Council was increasing the law enforcement level in the community in an affordable manner. Shelver suggested several options and the one that seemed most acceptable to the Council was to delete one of the daytime traffic units and replace it with a patrol unit to help combat daytime crime. This plan also calls for a community service officer to help relieve some of the daytime patrol officers' paperwork load and the continuation of the D.A.R.E. Project.

The Council's other budgetary concern was providing funding assistance to organizations such as the Old Time Days Association, the Lemon Grove Community Arts Council, CALPIRG, We Tip and the Heritage of American Museums. Members of the Council agreed it was more important to fund the local community organizations at this point and re-assess the possibility of aiding the others mid-year when the amount of sales tax revenues the City will receive can be estimated.

East County water group meets to discuss alternatives

The newly formed East County Water Conservation Committee (ECWCC) comprised of representatives from cities of El Cajon, La Mesa, Lemon Grove and Helix Water District met Wednesday, May 30th, to discuss programs to encourage conservation and cooperative efforts during the Stage 2 Water Alert.

The urgency of the four year drought prompted El Cajon Councilmember Harriet Stockwell to recommend frequent meetings of the committee during the summer months to evaluate the effectiveness of the ordinance. She further suggested that the committee avail itself of SANDAG information regarding reclaimed water.

La Mesa Councilmember Jerri Lopez cautioned the committee to focus on the reality of the consequences of conservation and the need to educate the public on how to audit their water use and make necessary conservation changes.

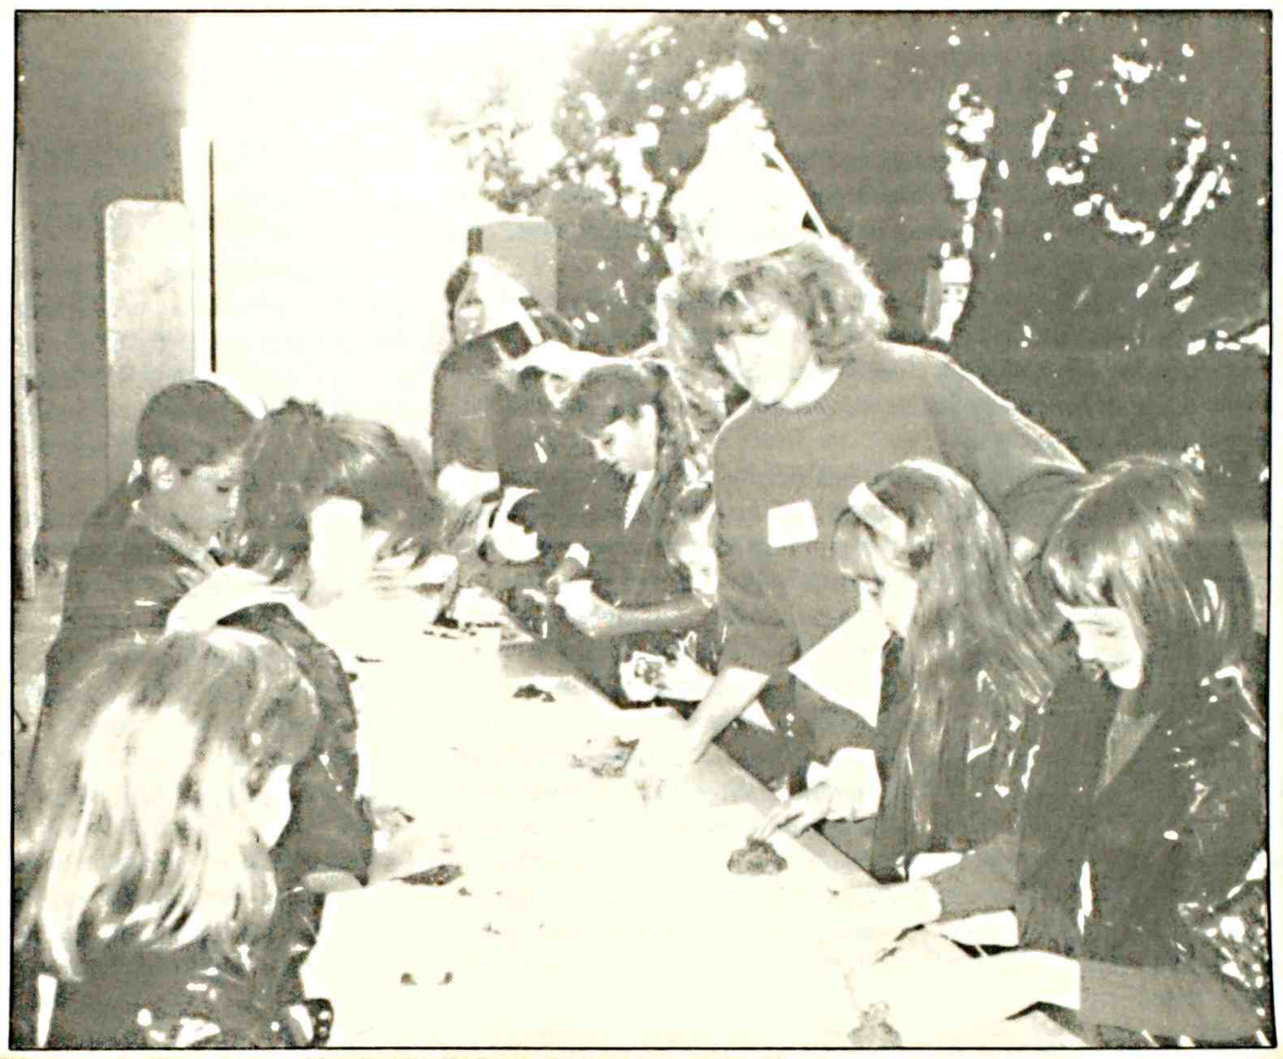
La Mesa's Assistant City Manager, Jim O'Grady cited La Mesa's water and money-saving use of tensiometers (moisture sensors) and agreed to share the findings with other members.

The possibility of working with representatives from the University of California on an area Xeriscape (dry landscaping) garden prompted Lemon Grove Mayor Jim Dorman to suggest materials be made available to customers wanting to use plant materials requiring less water.

Programs being considered include a cooperative venture between the San Diego County Water Authority, Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, San Diego Gas & Electric and Helix Water District. In such a program, low-flow shower heads and toilet leak detection would be offered to 10,000 customers within the Helix Water District.

With inevitable water shortages, the committee felt many aspects of the Stage 2 Water Alert might become year-round standards, necessitating additional revisions to the Water Conservation Ordinance. Helix Director, Bill Verbeck, asserted the need for county-wide cooperation on future ordinance revisions.

The next meeting of ECWCC will be June 14th.



Teachers dressed as "Hershey's Kisses" supervise while students fingerpaint and snitch samples of chocolate pudding in celebration of the book "The Chocolate Touch."

A variety of activities, including art projects such as creating a "Velveteen Rabbit" from yarn, fabric and glue, were enjoyed by students at the district-wide "Celebration of Literature."

Schools' Celebration of Literature

by Lisa Parsons

Finger painting with chocolate pudding, a treasure hunt and a Reading Olympics were just part of the Lemon Grove School District's Celebration of Literature held Wednesday and Thursday.

Twelve third graders from each of the elementary schools--Mt Vernon, San Altos, Golden Avenue, San Miguel, Monterey Heights and Vista La Mesa Elementary--gathered at San Miguel Elementary School Wednesday for a "Celebration of Books." The students were selected to participate in the celebration by their teachers after reading a list of books including: "The Chocolate Touch," "The Box Car Children," "The Velveteen Rabbit," "Ramona the Pest," "The Mouse and the Motorcycle," and "Little House in the Big Woods."

Cuyamaca College to train Chief Auto Parts management personnel

Starting this fall, Cuyamaca College will begin a training program relationship with Chief Auto Parts, Inc. The company, which will be opening 500 new stores within the next 5 years, is looking for people with management potential to work for them.

Kay Turman, Dean of Business and Vocational Education at the College, was instrumental in setting up the pilot program which will train employees of the company to become managers and associate managers. Cuyamaca is the only San Diego area college to participate in this program which is being field-tested throughout Southern California at seven community college campuses.

Before students may enroll in this paid internship program, they must complete 30 units at the college, 9 of which must be in Business/Supervision. Once they have done this, they may contact the job placement office for assessment and to arrange for an interview with the college and Chief Auto Parts, Inc.

According to Lawrence Barry, Business Department Coordinator, "This program, and others like it, are very important to Cuyamaca because we believe in serving the needs of the community, and one way to do just that is by forging strong ties with local businesses."

Lucky to get Lemon Grove Plaza site

The largest grocery stores in Lemon Grove, Alpha Beta located in Lemon Grove Plaza on Broadway and Lucky located on Lemon Grove Avenue, will swap locations beginning June 20th. The switch is a result of a Supreme Court anti-trust ruling that required Lucky's and Alpha Beta's parent company, American Stores, to divest itself of one of the food chains in order to keep food prices competitive.

According to a Lucky spokesman, Ken Hill, the switch will work in the following manor: Alpha Beta will close Wednesday, June 20th at 10 p.m. and will re-open as Lucky on Friday, June 22nd at 8 a.m. The Lucky store on Lemon Grove Avenue will close Thursday, June 21 at 10 p.m. and re-open as Alpha Beta at 8 a.m. on Saturday.

The employees will be moving with their stores, but all of the food, except the brands that are specific to the food chain, will stay in the stores.

The new Alpha Beta store on Lemon Grove Avenue will then be part of the Alpha Beta stores that will be put up for sale.

City Manager Jack Shelver said the store in Lemon Grove Plaza was substantially larger than the store on Lemon Grove Avenue and "I think this will be good for the community. I think it's good for Lemon Grove to have the more successful store at the larger site."

Deaf Helix senior wins scholarship

by Mishelle Lang

Senior Solomon Smaniotto was recently awarded the Elks Scholarship for the Deaf. Smaniotto will attend Galludet University, a four-year liberal arts college for the deaf located in Washington, D.C.

"The eligibility requirements were my disability and my (3.3) GPA," said Smaniotto.

Smaniotto enjoyed an acting career, which began at age 6 and lasted until he was 12. During that time, he played a scene for the popular prime time soap "Dallas."

"It was a dream scene," said Smaniotto. "It was complicated like a soap opera."

Smaniotto exchanged a script for a football helmet. This year he played nose guard for the Highlander football team.

I am looking forward to playing football for Galludet," said Smaniotto. "I am very thankful to Helix for my experience this year."

The former TV actor said he will probably not take up professional acting again. "I just act for fun," said Smaniotto. "I want to major in business administration at Galludet and use my degree to set up recreational services for the deaf in California."

Deaf teacher Vadja Kolombatovic, for whom Smaniotto is a math TA, is very complimentary of his assistant's abilities.

"He is an outstanding deaf student and athlete," said Kolombatovic, "and an excellent role model for the Hearing Impaired program as well as in Jamie Wilson, Pitcher & Catcher - Hit 2 singles, scored 2 runs and put out 2 runners.

The Wild Thing played double-headers against teams who played only 1 game per day, in temperatures exceeding 100 degrees. In spite of sun-and-heat-sickness and minor injuries, this 9-to-11-year-old Wild Thing hustled and hung in to finish every game and take 2nd place in their division. We're very proud of them! The managing staff, Kim and Darrell Ledford, Tim Smith and Theresa Willi, put a fine team together in a very short time while also working with their various regular-season teams.

Phil Wendell and Julie Wilson, Camera Crew and assistant pitching coaches, were able to catch most of the action on film, along with some hilarious ground and sky shots and off-field interactions by Julie and entertaining play-by-play from Phil.

The selfless dedication of the room chaperones: Theresa Willi, Mylaine Bonar, Susan Sergent and Julie Wilson, the excellent umpiring of Wayne Campbell, and the unfaltering support of the girls' families made this tournament a wonderful experience for the Wild Thing to cherish.

Our hearts and prayers are with the Sylvia family. The Wild Thing families are conducting fund-raisers to ease that portion of their ordeal. Contact Julie Wilson, Mylaine Bonar or Phil Wendell with your support of this endeavor.

Which Movie Star Should We Believe?

by Paul Treske

It happens every election year, and every election year we declare that "something ought to be done." But nothing happens and every year the list of propositions on our ballot grows longer and more difficult to comprehend. This year, seventeen separate propositions with topics ranging from wildlife to re-apportionment challenged the abilities of all of us to achieve even minimal comprehension. Some were blatantly manipulative efforts by easily defined pressure groups. Others were so obfuscatingly written that one can only try to judge them by who supported them and who didn't. But even here it would seem to depend on who your favorite film star is. On propositions 118 and 119 Jack Lemmon, Jim Garner and Bea Arthur stack up against Charlton Heston. Take your pick!

A concept which started out as an exercise in direct voter democracy has, unfortunately, become instead a paradise for pressure groups loaded with unlimited funds for TV confusion, and a convenient hiding place for legislators who would like to avoid taking a recorded stand on a tough issue. "Let the voters decide!" It sounds very democratic on the surface, but in a representative form of government such as ours, we elect people to make the decisions for us. In its original concept, the ballot proposition was reserved for those special grass roots problems or bond issues that had no other means of public airing or resolution. Today, anyone wanting, for whatever reason, to circumvent the legislative process, has only to pay an army of professional "signature getters" to put his issue on the ballot. Usually, once there, millions are then spent to promote it through TV and other media ads. When it comes time to vote, most of us are not really sure what it is we are voting for or against.

Most legislation, especially that regarding money, is far too complex to present and discuss in a simple ballot proposition. And yet we vote on it; trusting to hype, "hunches" or the endorsements of movie stars. Let's hope that in the near future, legislative enactment will be returned to the legislators and our ballot will only contain those propositions that really come from us. After all, we pay our representatives to do the job and we can always vote them out if they don't.

From Where I Sit

The Morning Light

by Frank Andrews

The thrill of the day has been my time of meditation and appreciation spent on my front patio each early morning.

My daily routine lately starts about 5:00 a.m. and includes a short walk up the avenue, never past the "point of no return" as I do have to get back home. It's uphill going and downhill returning so I can put my trusty cane in overdrive and really get up speed. My worn out ticker really pulses after that, but I do feel a lot better for the long day ahead.

A year ago I could hardly walk across the room without puffing and suffering severe fatigue. I went in the hospital for an angiogram, which is to run a catheter up to the heart by way of an incision in the groin to find any blockage in the main arteries surrounding the heart. Some of them were restricted so an angioplasty was performed. That consisted of attaching a tiny balloon to the end of the catheter, reinserting, and blowing it up to enlarge the closed artery.

This helped my condition for a few months and then the exhaustion started again. So a couple of months ago another angiogram was made and no restrictions were found. The culprit was strictly the heart which has grown hard and fibrous, consequently not enough blood is being pumped to keep this big body going. I guess I'm just too "big hearted."

My dear cardiologist, Dr. Ostrander, prescribed a new, powerful heart medication and canceled all my other medicine, save for one aspirin a day. In a few weeks I began to feel better and more alive than I have for many a moon.

Now after my walk, I plop down in the patio chair to rest, listen to the many bird sounds, and thank the Lord for all His handywork. The early birds are at their best and loudest at daybreak, but it only lasts until the first commuter starts his engine.

About 6:00 a.m. the daily turbulence starts: neighbors scurrying to their jobs either in their cars or by the new shiny, red trolley at the busy Lemon Grove/Massachusetts station. As the noise of the city increases, the music of the birds subsides and finally shuts off like a switch that has been pulled.

By 7:00 a.m. I have had my daily constitutional and quiet time so I'm ready for the trials and tribulations of the forthcoming day. My lovely wife, Willie, has by now arisen from her comfy bed, fixed her face, and is ready for her Corn Flakes. I get sick and tired of the recommended leaves and twigs for breakfast and cheat with eggs and sausage once in a while.

In my senior years I have acquired the bad habit of early rising and now would not miss the sunrise, as I have found it to be the best part of my day. After my recent revelation, to sleep-in would be a cardinal sin.

It's the Law

by Anne Celentino, Attorney at Law

Question: When I applied for a job, the employer told me that the job offer was conditioned on me passing a medical exam, including a drug test. The employer also told me that, if I got the job, he could ask me to take a drug test if he suspected I was using drugs or alcohol on the job. Can the employer do this?

Answer: Yes. Employers in the private-sector can require that job applicants who receive conditional offers of employment take and pass a medical examination, which includes a test to detect the presence of drugs and alcohol. A pre-employment drug testing policy should: 1) Give applicants advance notice that job offers are conditional on successful completion of a medical examination (including a drug test); 2) Ensure urine samples are collected in a medical environment without direct observation; 3) Give the applicant the opportunity to report any medication he has taken in the past 72 hours; 4) Ensure that positive results are double tested; 5) Ensure that specific medical results are not released by the laboratory and that the employer is only told whether the applicant passed the medical exam; 6) Allow the applicant to challenge the results; and 7) Allow the applicant to reapply for the job within a reasonable period of time.

In sum, so long as applicants have advance notice of testing, the sample collection process respects individual privacy and access to test results is limited, the employer can do pre-employment drug testing.

An employer can probably test current employees for drugs and alcohol under certain circumstances, even employees who are not in jobs involving public safety. An employer may ask employees in non-safety-sensitive positions to take a drug test if the employer has a reasonable belief that the employee's job performance is affected by the use of drugs or alcohol.

An employer may also be able to test its employees if it believes the employee may have contributed to an accident while at work which involves a fatality, injury, or damage to property. However, like with job applicants, the urine sample should be collected in private in a medical environment, the employee should have the opportunity to report any medication he has taken in the past 72 hours, positive results should be double tested, the laboratory should only disclose to the employer the employee's fitness for the job and the employee should have an opportunity to challenge positive results.

Sunday is a guaranteed Fun Day for all San Diego Padre fans and all they need is a camera.

Jack McKeon's warriors close out a 3-game series with Tommy Lasorda's smog-city Dodgers Sunday and even Los Angeles groupies are likely to hustle out and take a few snaps during the pre-game film frolicking.

Stadium gates will open early and every Joe and Jill with (or without) picture taking skills, will get their fill of friendly Padre players up close and personal.

Paying heed to Stadium Czar Bill Wilson, who is committed to keeping the playing field as green and true as the lawns at Windsor Castle, the picture taking crowd will filter along the warning track guarding the outfield wall.

That is more than just a grass saving decision. It's a judgment call that has the full support of Wilson, who used to be the Prefect of Police in Pasadena. It's based on hard evidence of attempted culpable naughtiness.

In the shade of yesteryear, a neophyte photographer tried a double-take as a player and tried to steal a base. He didn't speed from first to second ahead of an imagined throw like any other normal modern day Walter Mitty. No sir. This filching photographer actually tried to snatch the second base sack and cart it home in his camera bag.

The eagle-eyed security folks at the stadium prevented this miscarriage of playing paraphernalia and temptation was reduced by moving the Photo Day shooting line back to the warning track.

It actually works out better for the home style shutterbugs. The shooting line is almost twice as long out there and there is plenty of room for posing with your favorite players as they roam down the photo range.

Padre players are "real life" kind of neighbors and are generous with their time during a fan-related venture like Photo Day. They will pose (time willing) with Grampa, or the kids, or Aunt Molly, or just you. If you can arrange to take turns with another shooter beforehand.

A couple of hints may prove helpful. The sun is usually pretty strong and if you have a strobe light, it's a good idea to use it. The added light will soften the shadows caused by the noon-day sun.

It may sound silly, but make sure you bring film. Believe it or not, somebody always forgets. You can spot them easily. They'll be the ones wandering around asking others if they have any "extra" film. It happens every year.

Pose the player and your other principals facing the sun, if possible. At least catch the light coming from the side. Get close enough to fill your view finder and take two or three snaps just to "make sure."

A few random shots of others taking pictures of players always seems to add more "meat" to the memories of the day.

Then sit back, relax and enjoy the game. If you're close enough, or if you have a long enough lens, you may even get an action shot of Lasorda "reasoning" a call with an umpire.

Now, if the Padres can just sweep the series. Wouldn't that be a great way to enjoy Photo Day? You're darn tootin' it would.

Letter to the Editor

Are we saving water to support growth?

The Editor,

Where has all the water gone? Last month we had plenty. Now we are asked to cut back by 10%.

In FY '89, San Diego consumed 620,000 acre feet of water. Personal use, as opposed to agriculture and industrial use, was 65%, or 430,000 acre feet. That's a lot of water (an acre foot is 360,000 gallons).

If we are going to cut back to save water, it might be helpful to know where and how it is being used:

One half of our personal use was outside the home on lawns, car wash, gardens and driveways.

One sixth of our personal use was to flush toilets, often for one cigarette butt at a time.

One third of our personal use was for cooking, washing, showering, bathing, scrubbing, cleaning, etc.

Cutting back should not be too difficult. Two major water saving proposals have thus far been offered: water lawns and autos only between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m.; and serve water in restaurants only on request. This should guarantee a savings of the proverbial "drop in the bucket."

A 10% cut back would create an additional 43,000 acre feet of water to be distributed by the Water Authorities. This is enough water to overfill the reservoirs. This is the upside. The downside is that this is also enough water to support the move of 215,000 new people to San Diego. (An acre foot of water will keep a family of five in water for one year.)

I am afraid that the savings may not be used to fill the reservoirs, but will be devoured by someone whom we don't even know and is not even a San Diegan...yet! Let's be selfish; let's keep San Diego for San Diegans. No one wants to see more people standing in our lines or more cars creeping on our highways.

Seventy thousand people moved to San Diego last year and thousands more are on their way. Support the Drought! Keep them out!

Don't Conserve! Waste Water! You will actually be performing a Public Service.

Medical Trio to speak at Grossmont Hospital on MS

"Multiple Sclerosis: Past, Present and Future" will be the topic of a free program from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m., June 12, in the Main Auditorium of Grossmont Hospital.

Speakers will be neurologist Mark Levine, M.D.; psychiatrist Robert Marks, M.D., medical director of the Grossmont Rehabilitation Center; and Jeffrey Sealy, Ph.D., director of chapter services for the San Diego Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Grossmont Hospital is located at 5555 Grossmont Center Drive in La Mesa.

Radiologist to discuss imaging

Radiologist Stanley Rapoport, M.D., will present a free lecture on magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) at 7 p.m., July 12, in the Main Auditorium of Grossmont Hospital. A tour of the MRI unit will be conducted after the lecture.

MRI systems use a powerful magnetic field in conjunction with radio waves to cause hydrogen atoms or other selected elements in the body to give off faint signals, which are picked up and computer-processed into various images.

These highly detailed images can be viewed in any direction or plane and with greater contrast than is possible with other forms of imaging.

Magnetic resonance scanners can image parts of the body previously hidden from view by bone, since they "see" through the bone, which has few hydrogen atoms, to the marrow. MRI may also aid in the diagnosis of diseases affecting the bone marrow.

"There are many applications of MRI that we are learning about daily," said Dr. Rapoport, who is director of MRI services at Grossmont.

"In the future, it may be used for studying subtle changes in body chemistry, making more complete diagnoses of brain damage, monitoring inflammations of the spinal column and more accurately predicting stroke patients' recovery."

To register for the MRI lecture, or for more information, call 589-4140.

Grossmont buys two new MRI units

Grossmont Hospital has announced the purchase of two new Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) units and a new computed tomography (CT) scanner. The new MRI equipment will allow twice as many patients to be scheduled on a timely basis, With these additions, Grossmont will become the first hospital in East County to have two MRIs. One of the new units will be installed in the Grossmont Medical Arts Building this fall, and the second will be installed in the hospital at the end of the year.

Grossmont's original MRI system became operational in October 1986. This original unit, which has a magnetic field strength of 1.0 Tesla (or 25,000 times the strength of the earth's magnetic field).

"These new MRIs produce images with such outstanding clarity and detail that we will be able to better identify problems of the spinal column, the abdomen, the brain, heart and other organs," said James Mom, Grossmont Hospital's Director of Imaging. "There are more and more applications of MRI that we are learning about every day, involving soft tissue, bone marrow and even changes in body chemistry," he said.

MRI systems use radio waves to create highly detailed images of the human anatomy. Patients being scanned by MRI are not exposed to ionizing radiation at all.

The average number of patients having MRI scans at Grossmont currently is almost 500 a month.

The new CT scanner will replace the system currently in use, which the hospital has been using for seven years. This will be the third upgrade in CT scanners that Grossmont has made since becoming the first hospital south of Los Angeles to install a CT scanner in 1974.

About 20 to 30 patients a day currently receive CT scans at Grossmont. With the new CT equipment, it is estimated that the hospital will be able to accommodate 10 percent more patients for this sophisticated type of x-ray procedure.

Teachers and librarians from the schools were dressed appropriately for the books they were celebrating-- some wore bunny or mouse ears and others were dressed like chocolate kisses. One station for each book was created and the children played games like Bingo that incorporated questions from the books they read or did art projects, such as finger painting with chocolate pudding, to tie in with the book, "The Chocolate Touch."

Nadine Haddock, who helped organize the event, said the idea behind the Celebration of Books was to find a non-competitive way to reward the third graders for reading all the books.

Fourth and fifth graders in the district participated in a more competitive literary event, the Reading Olympics at San Altos Elementary School. Five fourth graders and five fifth graders from each school were required to complete a reading list of eight and nine books, respectively, and then be selected by their teacher and Olympic Chairman to compete.

The students were grouped together in teams and then asked questions about the books they had read. They were required to write down the best and most complete answers they could and these answers were evaluated by a panel of teachers/judges. Those judging were: Jacquie Loftis, Bonnie White, Terri Nelson, Jim Azevedo, Vicki Pool and Debie Simpson. Superintendent Justeson and Ms. Wittrock acted as arbitrators.

The fourth grade contest winners were: First Place, San Altos & Vista La Mesa; Second Place, Monterey Heights and Third Place, San Miguel.

The fifth grade contest winners were: First Place, Monterey Heights; Second Place, San Altos and Third Place, Mount Vernon.

"We wanted our students to read a select list of books and develop an appreciation and love of fine literature," said Bill Mackinson, Reading Olympics committee co-chairman. "We hoped to give them a good start."

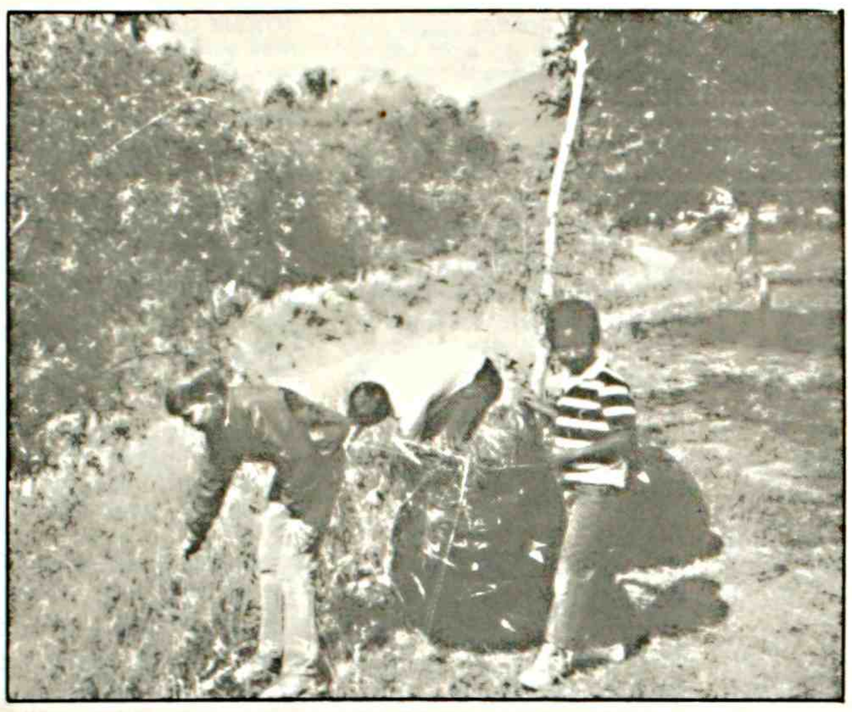
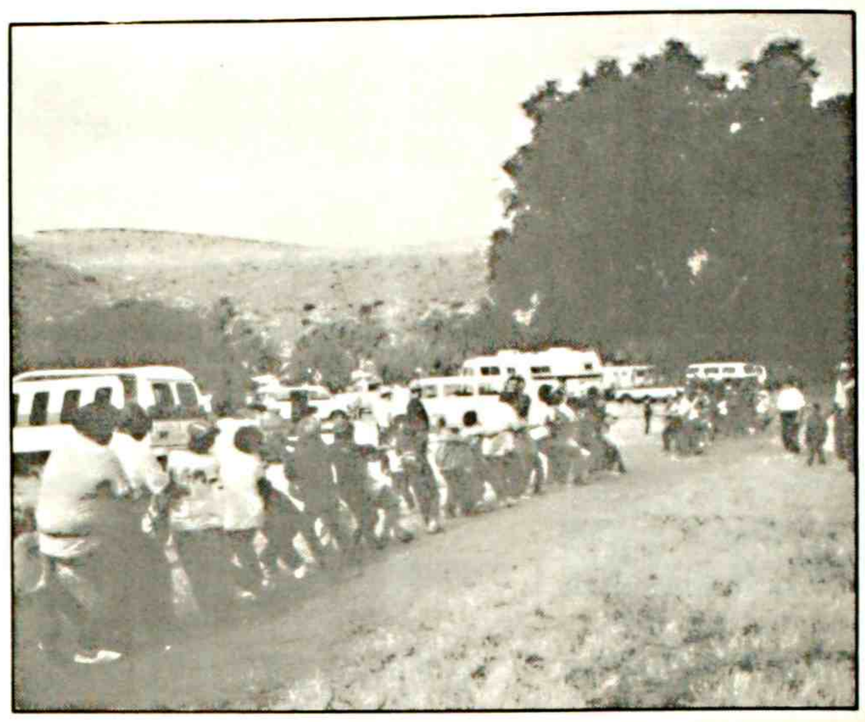
Fathers and sons trade work for campsite

by Spencer Rees

The fathers and sons from the seven wards and one branch of Sweetwater Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints gathered at Thousand Trails Park near Otay Lakes for an overnight camp out on Friday, May 11.

Marc Hunter, camp director, found a way to put the group to work to earn camping privileges. "In trying to find a campsite near home and yet one we could afford, I contacted Bill Adair, camp supervisor, about the availability and costs of their facilities for our group," he said. "I was told that it was available but the cost would be $7 per tent or vehicle. When I expressed a desire for a service project to acquaint our boys with helping 'Mother Nature' stay clean and tidy, I was told that the fee now had dropped to zero."





The camp officials were hardly prepared for the 220 fathers and sons as they left their campsites and descended upon the campground maintenance crews for their service assignments.

For two or three hours, father and son crews could be seen with trash bags tidying up. Others were chopping weeds, raking leaves, and improving hiking trails.

On Friday evening around a campfire, Brad Hill spoke to the group on the theme of building lasting relationships between fathers and sons and between good friends. Ghost storytelling followed.

On Saturday morning, after a hearty breakfast, games were played, including tug-o-war, won by the sons as they dragged the fathers over the line.

The weekend was a great opportunity for fathers and sons.

Bancroft Drive project to be completed by end of July

Months of eating dust, dodging heavy road equipment and stressing out in standstill traffic are about to end for local residents and businesses along Spring Valley's busy Bancroft Drive.

A massive road reconstruction project which began there last November will be completed before the end of July, nearly one month ahead of schedule, said Gary Conard, who is heading the project for Maya Construction Company, a Tucson-based firm.

The San Diego County Board of Supervisors awarded Maya the $2.7 million contract last year to make improvements which are expected make the heavily trafficked area safer in a variety of ways, said Conard.

Historically, Bancroft drive, a relatively narrow two-lane road which has long been plagued with speeders, was known for being especially hazardous to drivers making turns from either direction, said one county official. "The road had a reputation for tail-enders," he said. With that in mind, the county's reconstruction plans called for a wider road that would accommodate a center turn lane. It would also accommodate bike lanes on both sides of the street.

"It's still going to be a two-lane road, but the turn lane should help out a lot," said the official.

The addition of sidewalks will cure another of the road's major safety flaws, said Conard. In the past, school children who attended Spring Valley Elementary School, which boarders Bancroft Drive, were forced to use the shoulder of the road when walking to and from school, he said.

As part of a flood control measure, the county also opted to install an underground box culvert, which will replace the existing drainage ditch along a one-half mile stretch of Bancroft.

"It 's going to be much more effective than what they've got there now," said Conard. This box is designed to handle 100-year floods -- maybe even 500-year floods."

The former drainage system, a swampy channel that ran along much of Bancroft's northern end, was only marginally effective as a form of flood control in recent years, said several homeowners in the area.

"During heavy rains, some of my neighbors have had to sandbag around their homes. It's been a real concern for us," said one homeowner.

As a result of the new sewer system, many of the surrounding areas once designated as flood plains, will no longer be zoned as such, said Dave Solomon, the County's deputy engineer.

For home and land owners, this should be great news. Re-zoning will mean enhanced property values, lower insurance rates and fewer restrictions on land use overall, he said.

The project, which has been in the talking stages for more than 20 years, gained more attention in recent years because of interest generated by the Spring Valley Revitalization Advisory Committee, according to Eldon Horton, long-time Spring Valley resident who recently joined Supervisor George Bailey's staff.

"The first thing the group did when it was formed in 1986 was to study the needs of the area," said Horton, who was then a member of the committee. "It was the unanimous opinion of the members that there was a crying need for flood control projects in Spring Valley."

When the county's road improvement budget was bolstered through the passage of Proposition A two years ago, money to cover most of the funding for the Bancroft Drive project was approved, and additional money for the project came from funds generated by gasoline sales taxes in the county, Horton said.
